Herman and Charlie out of a job and broke, go to an employment agency looking for a job and learn that the only position open is for a colored porter on a Pullman train. Disgusted, they leave the employment agency and seat themselves on the curb in front of the agency. An auto parked nearby throws out a heavy cloud of black soot which completely disguises Charlie. He returns to the agency and secures the job as a colored porter. Going aboard on the train, he takes Herman with him and after a series of exciting adventures the train eventually reaches its destination and the heroes have been transported at no cost to themselves and with happenings that give them much to talk about.
